Demonstrators protest against military action in Iran after U.S. President Donald Trump said that he had agreed to a two-week ceasefire with Iran, outside the White House in Washington, D.C., U.S., on April 7, 2026. | Photo Credit: Reuters

U.S. President Donald Trump pulled back on his threats to launch devastating strikes on Iran late on Tuesday (April 7, 2026), swerving to de-escalate the war less than two hours before the deadline he set for Tehran to capitulate or face a major escalation. He said he had come to the decision “based on conversations” with Pakistan Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Gen Asim Munir.

Tehran said on Wednesday (April 8, 2026) its 10-point plan for securing an end to the war with the United States would require Washington to accept its uranium enrichment program and the lifting of all sanctions.

Pakistan's Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif said on Wednesday (April 8, 2026) that the United States, Iran and their allies had agreed to a ceasefire “everywhere”

Mr. Trump said on Saturday (April 4, 2026) that Tehran had 48 hours left to cut a deal or face “all Hell”, as U.S. and Iranian forces scrambled to find a downed American airman, adding, later, on Tuesday (April 7, 2026), that “a whole civilisation will die” if Iran does not accept his deal and reopen the Strait of Hormuz before his 8 p.m. deadline.

Ukraine welcomes the ■ceasefire agreed between the ■U.S. and Iran and the ■unblocking of the Strait ■of ■Hormuz, ■Foreign ■Minister Andrii Sybiha said on X ■today, calling for similar “decisiveness” by Washington ■in stopping Russia’s war in Ukraine.

“American decisiveness ■works. We believe ■it is time for sufficient decisiveness to force ■Moscow to cease fire and end its ■war against Ukraine,” ■Mr. Sybiha wrote.

The announcement of the ceasefire, along with the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz, will provide immediate relief to exporters by easing shipping disruptions, FIEO said today.

Iran agreed to allow safe navigation through the Strait of Hormuz during the ceasefire, triggering sweeping market moves across oil, equities and currencies.

“The ceasefire and reopening of the Strait of Hormuz bring immediate relief to exporters by easing shipping disruptions, high freight rates, and insurance costs,” Federation of Indian Export Organisations (FIEO) President S.C. Ralhan said.

He said that while this should help normalise logistics in the short term, exporters will remain cautious given the temporary nature of the truce.

German Foreign Minister ■Johann Wadephul today welcomed ■the two-week ceasefire the ■U.S. and Iran.

“I ■welcome the ■decision by the warring parties ■to agree to a ceasefire in the ■Iran war,” the Minister wrote ■on X.

“This must ■be the crucial first step towards lasting ■peace, for the consequences of the war ■continuing would ■be incalculable,” he said.

U.S. President Donald Trump in a social media post, declared the ceasefire agreement a “big day for World Peace” and that the U.S. “will be helping with the traffic buildup in the Strait of Hormuz.”

“There will be lots of positive action!” Mr. Trump predicted in his post.

“Big money will be made. Iran can start the reconstruction process. We’ll be loading up with supplies of all kinds, and just hanging around to make sure that everything goes well. I feel confident that it will.”

Trump’s message on his Truth Social website signals Washington’s concern about Iran maintaining its chokehold over the narrow mouth of the Persian Gulf, through which 20% of all oil and natural gas passes in peacetime.

Bahrain sounded its missile alert alarm hours after U.S. and Iran said they agreed on a 2-week ceasefire in the war.

Iran in the Farsi-language version of its 10-point ceasefire plan, included the phrase “acceptance of enrichment” for its nuclear programme, something that was missing in English versions shared by Iranian diplomats to journalists.

It wasn’t immediately clear why that term was missing.

However, U.S. President Donald Trump had said ending Iran’s nuclear programme entirely was a key point of the war.

Mr. Trump, after Iran issued its 10-point plan, had described it as fraudulent, without elaborating.

U.S. President Donald Trump said today the United States will be helping with the traffic buildup in the Strait of Hormuz.

Israel said today that a U.S.-Iran ceasefire deal “does not include Lebanon”, which was drawn into the war after Iran-backed group Hezbollah launched attacks on Israel.

“The two-weeks ceasefire does not include Lebanon,” the office of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in a statement.

The statement contradicted an earlier announcement by Pakistan’s Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, who has acted as a mediator in the conflict, that said the ceasefire covers “everywhere including Lebanon”.

Israel endorses Trump's two-week pause on Iran strikes, clarifying that Lebanon remains excluded from the ceasefire agreement.

The International Air Transport Association (IATA), which represents global airlines, has urged governments to adopt greater energy security around key issues such as jet fuel, IATA Chief Willie Walsh said today.

Ms. Walsh was speaking at a conference in Singapore as the Iran war drives up jet fuel costs for airlines across the world.

Netanyahu says Israel backs U.S. ceasefire with Iran, but that deal doesn’t cover fighting against Hezbollah in Lebanon.

U.S. President Donald Trump told AFP that he believed China had helped get Iran to the negotiating table to agree a two-week ceasefire deal.

“I hear yes,” Mr. Trump said in a telephone call when asked if Beijing was involved in getting key ally Tehran to negotiate on a truce.

Mr. Trump is due to travel to Beijing in May to meet Chinese President Xi Jinping.

President Donald Trump told AFP on that the United States had won a “total and complete victory” after agreeing on a two-week ceasefire deal with Iran.

“Total and complete victory. 100%. No question about it,” Mr. Trump said in a brief telephone interview shortly after the announcement of the truce.

U.S. President Donald Trump told AFP that Iran’s uranium would be “perfectly taken care of” under a two-week ceasefire deal with Tehran.

“That will be perfectly taken care of or I wouldn’t have settled,” Mr. Trump said in a telephone interview when asked about what would happen to Iran’s enriched uranium.

White House Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt praised the two-week ceasefire in the Iran war, calling it a “victory” for the United States.

"This is a victory for the United States that President Trump and our incredible military made happen," Ms. Leavitt wrote on X.

"The success of our military created maximum leverage, allowing President Trump and the team to engage in tough negotiations that have now created an opening for a diplomatic solution and long-term peace."

NATO chief Mark Rutte will hold talks with Donald Trump in Washington today, one day after the United States and Iran agreed to a two-week ceasefire.

The U.S. President has expressed anger at Western partners' refusal to back his war on Iran, rocking the 77-year-old transatlantic alliance.

He branded NATO partners "cowards" for limiting U.S. forces' access to bases on their territories and for refusing to lead efforts to open the Strait of Hormuz.

But NATO's secretary-general touts a record of pulling Mr. Trump back onside -- and will be looking to do so again when he meets the President, as well as U.S. top diplomat Marco Rubio and defence chief Pete Hegseth.

Oil prices plunged today while stocks rallied after the United States and Iran agreed to a two-week ceasefire that will see Tehran temporarily reopen the vital Strait of Hormuz.

The news pushed down crude prices, with West Texas Intermediate losing almost 20% and Brent as much as 16% as investors heaved a huge sigh of relief after more than five weeks of war that has hammered supplies.

The euphoria sent equities rocketing on hopes that the crisis that has shocked the global economy for more than a month would come to an end.

Pro-government demonstrators in the streets of Iran's capital, in the morning after the ceasefire had been announced, screamed: "Death to America, death to Israel, death to compromisers!" Organisers tried at a point to calm demonstrators, but they continued the chants.

They also burned American and Israeli flags in the street.

It shows the ongoing anger from hard-liners, who had been preparing for what many assumed would be an apocalyptic battle with the U.S.

Iran said today it would guarantee safe passage for maritime traffic through the vital Strait of Hormuz for two weeks, announcing that the pause would be used for talks with the United States on ending the war, starting April 10 in Islamabad.

"For a period of two weeks, safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz will be possible via coordination with Iran's Armed Forces and with due consideration of technical limitations," Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi posted on X.

The Islamic republic's Supreme National Security Council said in a separate statement the negotiations were set to last two weeks but could be "extended by mutual agreement of the parties."

Israel is still attacking Iran, a military official said today.

The remarks by the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity in line with regulations, came moments after the White House said Israel had agreed to the terms of the two-week U.S.-Iran ceasefire agreement.

Iran also kept up fire on Israel.

Pakistan on today invited the U.S. and Iran for talks in Islamabad on April 10.

Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, in a social media post, announced that the U.S. and Iran, along with their allies, have agreed to an immediate ceasefire amid the ongoing West Asia conflict.

“With the greatest humility, I am pleased to announce that the Islamic Republic of Iran and the United States of America, along with their allies, have agreed to an immediate ceasefire everywhere, including Lebanon and elsewhere, effective immediately,” he said.

Mr. Sharif said Pakistan has invited delegations from both countries to Islamabad on April 10 for face-to-face talks aimed at reaching a conclusive agreement “to settle all disputes”.

Israel’s military issued three warnings in quick succession today that Iran had fired missiles toward it, moments after U.S. President Donald Trump said he had agreed to postpone a massive attack on Iran.

The warnings came after Mr. Trump said he had agreed to suspend an attack on Iranian infrastructure for two weeks and was ready for a ceasefire in the war if Tehran completely reopens the vital Strait of Hormuz.

“The (Israeli army) identified missiles launched from Iran toward the territory of the State of Israel. Defensive systems are operating to intercept the threat,” the military said on its official Telegram channel.

Australian Prime Minister Anthony Albanese described U.S. President Donald Trump’s threat to destroy Iran’s civilian infrastructure as not “appropriate” today but he welcomed a two-week ceasefire as “positive”.

“I don’t think it’s appropriate to use language such as that from the president of the United States, and I think it will cause some concern,” Mr. Albanese told Sky News Australia.

“We have called for is a de-escalation, and that is what has occurred, and that’s a good thing,” he added.

The White House is considering in-person talks with Iran but they have not been finalised, Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt said Tuesday, after Washington and Tehran agreed to a two-week ceasefire.

“There are discussions about in-person talks, but nothing is final until announced by the President or the White House,” Ms. Leavitt said after Iran said it agreed to talks with the United States to begin on April 10 in Pakistan.

Iraq's Foreign Ministry said today it "welcomes" a two-week ceasefire between the United States and Iran, calling for "serious and sustainable dialogue" between the nations.

The Ministry "calls for building upon this positive step by launching serious and sustainable dialogue tracks that address the root causes of the disputes and strengthen mutual trust," it posted on X.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Iran, Seyed Abbas Araghchi, today thanked the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Shehbaz Sharif and Field Marshal Asim Munir for "their tireless efforts to end the war" in West Asia.

Based on U.S.'s "15-point proposal as well as announcement by POTUS about acceptance of the general framework of Iran's 10-point proposal as a basis for negotiations," Mr. Araghchi declared that if attacks against Iran are halted, their Powerful Armed Forces will cease their defensive operations.

"For a period of two weeks, safe passage through the Strait of Hormuz will be possible via coordination with Iran's Armed Forces and with due consideration of technical limitations," he added.

Tehran said today its 10-point plan for securing an end to the war with the United States would require Washington to accept its uranium enrichment program and the lifting of all sanctions.

The Islamic republic said in a statement released alongside a list of the 10 points published by state media that the plan would require "continued Iranian control over the Strait of Hormuz, acceptance of enrichment, lifting of all primary and secondary sanctions."

Iran's 10-point plan demands U.S. acceptance of uranium enrichment and lifting all sanctions to end the conflict.

U.S. President Donald Trump said ■on Tuesday he has agreed "to suspend the bombing ■and attack of Iran for a period of two weeks." Mr. Trump said he ■spoke to leaders in Pakistan, which has ■been a mediator between Washington ■and ■Tehran and which ■had sought a two-week ceasefire in the Iran war.

Trump agrees to a two-week suspension of attacks on Iran, citing a potential basis for negotiation following Iran's proposal.
